this a fictionalized account of a true story the tale of how two rough maine woodsmen took a young Theodore Roosevelt under their wing in 1878 and introduced him to the beautiful but unforgiving woodlands of the northeast under their guidance the frail but strong willed New Yorker becomes a worthy outdoorsman an experience which significantly shaped the world view of the man poised to become the 26th president of the United States thirteen years later the true story of how two Maine woodsmen taught Theodore Roosevelt to stand on his own two feet in the northern woods 1878 fiction

This is a work of fiction in the fall of 1878 twenty year old Theodore Roosevelt made the first of three trips to northern Maine where he was guided through the wilderness by two seasoned woodsmen William Wingate Sewall and Wilmot Dow. It was here that Theodore learned to be an outdoorsman and to feel comfortable with the tough men who worked in the backwoods. These journeys to Maine transformed Theodore from a sickly depressed boy to a young man who was ready to take on the world. Roosevelt would later comment on Sewall: "There is no one who could more clearly give the account of me when I was a young man and ever since between his three visits which all took place within a year Roosevelt covered over one thousand miles of virgin forest, frozen lakes and cedar swamps. These explorations were undertaken by foot, snowshoe, canoe, sleigh and buckboard in all sorts of weather and through difficult terrain." This story is also about how Theodore met his first wife Alice Hathaway Lee and follows their courtship. Alice was his first passionate love and during his trips to Maine she was always on his mind. In the 60s my father bought some land from William Sewall's grandson. As a boy I roamed the same woods as Theodore and grew up listening to the many stories of his time in Maine from William Sewall's descendants and the offspring of the woodsman who knew him. In this account I have tried to imagine what these journeys were like and have taken some creative license in doing so but at the same time stayed true to the original experience. Even so all characters other than Theodore Roosevelt, Alice Lee Dickey, Saltonstall, Bill and David Sewall and Wilmot Dow are the invention of the author and all conversation except where it is quoting other text is the invention of the author. I hope you enjoy learning about this fascinating time in Theodore Roosevelt's life and northern Maine as much as I have. Sincerely yours, Robert Louis Demayo

Theodore Roosevelt was one of the first most prominent and most influential conservationists this nation has ever known. Paul Russell Cutright shows exactly how Roosevelt's early years contained the seeds of and led inevitably to the pioneering environmental policies he established during his presidency focusing on the years 1867-1901. Cutright illuminates Roosevelt's consistent preoccupation with the natural world especially birds. He highlights TR's boyhood museum of natural history, juvenile notebooks and essays on biology, mastery of taxidermy, Harvard training as a natural history major, travels to and writings on the Adirondacks, the West, Europe and the Middle East, involvement with the Boone and Crockett Club and successful conservation efforts as Governor of New York. All of these experiences gave Roosevelt the president the firm foundation he needed to become one of our country's foremost conservationists.
